8. Where no such records in the above categories exist, please provide a written statement to that effect.

With respect to the form of production, we note that relevant regulations require the production of records in an accessible, commonly used electronic form, to the extent feasible. See 950 CMR 32.04(5)(d). Record custodians are also required to implement new record keeping systems and databases in such a way as to allow for "retrieval of public portions of records to provide maximum public access." See 950 CMR 32.07(1)(e). Extraction of such data from a database or electronic record system does not constitute creating a new record. See 950 CMR 32.07(1)(f). Printing these records from a database or electronic system, redacting them with a marker, and then re-scanning them, is generally not consistent with these regulations; this process provides the digital records neither in the preferred form nor in a "searchable machine-readable form." 950 CMR 32.04(5)(d). If necessary, we welcome reasonable suggested modifications pursuant to 950 CMR 32.06(2)(g). Per Attorney Gen. v. Dist. Attorney for Plymouth Dist., 484 Mass. 260, 141 N.E.3d 429 (2020), compiling information from a database is not tantamount to creating a new record that would otherwise be precluded under public records law. Specifically: "Where public records are in electronic form, a public records request that requires a government entity to search its electronic database to extract requested data does not mean that the extracted data constitute the creation of a new record, which would not be required, under the public records law." Id. at 442 to 443. Thus, we request that your department query its database and provide a response to the records request.

Should you determine that some portions of the documents are exempt from disclosure, please release any reasonably segregable portions that are not exempt. In addition, please note for any such redactions the applicable statutory exemption and explain why it applies to the redacted or withheld information.

I also request that fees be waived as we believe this request is in the public interest, as suggested but not stipulated by the recommendations of the Massachusetts Supervisor of Public Records. In the event that there are fees, I would be grateful if you would inform me of the total charges in advance of fulfilling my request. I would prefer the request filled electronically, by e-mail attachment if available or CD-ROM if not.

Thank you in advance for your anticipated cooperation in this matter. I look forward to receiving your response to this request within 10 business days, as the statute requires.

Sincerely,

Joshua Dankoff

STOP AND FRISK

Policies and Procedures

STOP AND FRISK

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS AND GUIDELINES

Police contact with the public covers a broad spectrum. It may range from voluntary conversations to confrontations of a deadly nature. One aspect of this contact is embodied in the phrase "stop and frisk" (or threshold inquiry). It is a term used to cover situations where an officer observes an individual engaged in activity which demands investigation but does not afford the opportunity to arrest. This includes a person on foot or in a motor vehicle. Thus, the requirements of a threshold inquiry do not apply merely because an officer talks to an individual nor when he is stopping an individual to arrest him. On the other hand, the requirements for making a threshold inquiry are applicable when an individual is detained but there is no probable cause to arrest.

M.G.L. c. 41, sec. 98, as amended, provides that a police officer may examine all persons abroad whom he has reason to suspect of unlawful design and may search such persons for weapons if he reasonably suspects that he is in danger of death or bodily injury. "Unlawful design" has been defined to mean that the suspect has committed, is committing or is about to commit a crime. In the case of Terry vs. Ohio, 362 U.S. 1, (1968) the U.S. Supreme Court has stated that when a police officer observes unusual conduct which his police experience indicates might be criminal activity and that the persons involved may be armed and presently dangerous, and his initial contact with these suspects does not dispel his reasonable fear for his own or others' safety, he is then justified in conducting a limited search for weapons. The Court further stated that such a search is reasonable under the Fourth Amendment and any weapon seized may be properly introduced in evidence.

It should be carefully noted that a police officer cannot conduct a frisk as a pretext to search for evidence of crime; he must have reason to fear for his own safety or the safety of others. If, however, in the legitimate search for a weapon he does discover evidence of crime, his limited search was lawful and he now has probable cause for arrest.

A police officer should be constantly vigilant and alert to any possible danger when making a "Stop and Frisk". A routine police check of suspicious circumstances may uncover the commission of a serious crime or the presence of a dangerous criminal.

Stop and Frisk
Two

PROCEDURES

1. Probable cause is not required to justify a brief threshold inquiry or stop.
2. An officer must be able to point to specific and definite facts which reasonably warrant the stop. A mere hunch or unfounded suspicion is inadequate.
3. While field situations will cover a wide range of circumstances, certain factors may be considered in determining the reasonableness of the threshold inquiry:
 - a. personal observations of the officer and his police training and experience;
 - b. knowledge of criminal activity in the area;
 - c. time and place of observation;
 - d. general appearance and demeanor of suspect;
 - e. suspect's proximity to the scene of a reported crime;
 - f. knowledge of prior record of suspect or present companions;
 - g. objects in suspect's possession or obvious bulges in clothing;
 - h. resemblance of suspect to a person wanted for a known crime;
 - i. information received from a reliable source.

No single factor alone will normally be sufficient. An officer will have to be able to justify the factors that led to the decision to make the threshold inquiry.

4. When the decision is made to stop an individual, an officer should announce his identity and the purpose of the inquiry unless such information is obvious. Reasonable force may be used if the suspect refuses to stop when so directed, but this does not permit the use of firearms or other weapons. Reasonable force is the minimal amount of physical force required to overcome the resistance which is offered.

Stop and Frisk
Three

5. Once the stop is made, any questioning of the individual should be conducted at that location. For verification purposes it may be necessary to move a short distance to a radio or telephone.
6. An officer should question only briefly so that the stop cannot be construed as an arrest which would require probable cause. Sufficient time may be taken to make a radio or telephone inquiry to check on suspect's identity or the reliability of his story.
7. Certain conditions which become apparent during the threshold inquiry may add up to probable cause for arrest. Examples are:
 - a. refusal to answer a question to which an innocent person would normally respond;
 - b. an attempt to escape;
 - c. false, misleading or unbelievable answers.
8. An officer may frisk or pat-down an individual if he has reason to suspect that the officer's safety or that of others is in danger. The purpose of the frisk is to discover weapons that may be used to inflict harm. However, it is not necessary that the officer be absolutely certain that the individual is armed.
9. A valid stop, in and of itself, does not justify a search. The officer must perceive danger to himself or others because of events leading to the stop or events occurring during the stop.
10. The frisk must initially be limited to a pat-down of the individual's outer clothing.
11. If an officer feels an object which could reasonably be a weapon, he may conduct a further search for that particular object and remove it.
12. If after completing his pat-down of the suspect's outer clothing the officer does not feel an object which could reasonably be a weapon, he should discontinue the frisk.
13. A valid frisk may produce evidence which can amount to probable cause for an arrest. If probable cause exists, an arrest may be made and guidelines for searches incident to a valid arrest will apply.

Stop and Frisk
Four

14. Summary of "Stop and Frisk"

- a. A police officer may stop a person in a public place if he has reason to suspect that such person has committed, is committing or is about to commit a crime.
- b. A police officer may detain such a person, using reasonable force if he resists, for a brief period only, at or near the place where stopped.
- c. A police officer may frisk such a person if he reasonably suspects that he is in danger of harm from a weapon possessed by the suspect.
- d. If this frisk reveals the presence of any object which may be a weapon, a police officer may complete his search for such object.
- e. If in a lawful search for a weapon, a police officer discovers contraband or other evidence of crime, this could create probable cause for a lawful arrest.
- f. As soon as conveniently possible after a "Stop and Frisk", a police officer should make a written record of the incident, including the identity of the suspect and all important facts relative thereto, even in cases where no weapon or contraband is discovered or where the suspect is released.
